

Approximation of additive random fields

Marguerite Zani, MAMPO Université d'Orléans

We consider approximation problems for tensor products and additive random fields in the average case setting. The main question we are concerned with is “How much do we lose by considering standard information algorithms against those using general linear information?” We also study the probabilistic setting of the mentioned problem for tensor products.