A toolbox for topologists

Pablo Soberón, Northeastern University

During this talk we will discuss some variations of common configuration spaces for the test map scheme. The aim is to show a couple of examples where reducing the combinatorial complexity of the configuration space also results in a reduction to the topological machinery needed to solve the original problem.