Novel analyses of diffusion MRI fiber tractography to study the brain's connections in health and disease

Lauren O'Donnell, Harvard Medical School

Diffusion MRI is the only modality that can non-invasively trace the human brain's white matter connections. In this talk, I will provide an introduction to diffusion MRI tractography and describe recent computational work, including a new white matter atlas and novel machine learning and statistical methods for tractography analysis.