

The distance function from a real algebraic variety.

Giorgio Ottaviani, University of Florence

The distance function from a real algebraic variety can be computed as the smallest positive real root of an algebraic function.

Having in mind applications to the spectral theory of tensors, we show a duality property of this function and we describe its lowest and highest coefficients in several cases.

We show how this fits in the ED philosophy, where ED stands for "Euclidean Distance".