The Zipper Algorithm for Conformal Mapping

Steffen Rohde, University of Washington

The zipper algorithm, developed by Don Marshall and independently Reiner Kuehnau, is a powerful tool to numerically compute conformal maps. I will show some of its applications in probability and in dynamics, discuss its connection to Loewner theory, and will address convergence questions.