

Finite point configurations: a survey of techniques and ideas

Alex Iosevich, University of Rochester

The study of finite point configurations in sets of a given Hausdorff dimension has undergone rapid development in the past decade or so. We shall describe some of the recent results with emphasis on the underlying techniques and connections with related problems in analysis and combinatorics.