

Adaptive grids for embedded integral equation based solvers

Travis Askham, University of Washington

In this talk, we review the general framework for integral equation based approaches to the solution of inhomogeneous equations. We then discuss the performance of an adaptive Poisson solver built in this framework and some of the challenges for a priori mesh design in this setting.