

Packings in spherical confinements

Marjolein Dijkstra, Debye institute for Nanomaterials Science, Utrecht University

Packing of objects in a confining geometry remains a surprisingly difficult problem to solve. Here, we investigate the packing of a variety of particle shapes in spherical confinement using computer simulations. We compare our results with experimental observations on the self-assembly of nanoparticles in slowly evaporating emulsion droplets.