A New Variational Approach for Limited Angle Tomography
Rob Tovey, University of Cambridge

The limited angle problem in tomography arises when we attempt to account for imaging hardware constraints within the computational reconstruction step. We propose a new variational model which promotes anisotropic sparsity. This talk will cover the novel numerical scheme developed for the resulting non-smooth/non-convex optimization problem and show the improvements we gain over alternative methods.