

Computational challenges in cryo-electron microscopy

Amit Singer, Princeton University

Single particle cryo-electron microscopy (cryo-EM) is becoming an increasingly popular technique for determining three-dimensional molecular structures at high resolution. We will discuss the mathematical principles for reconstruction using cryo-EM. The talk will focus on computational challenges, in particular, reconstruction of small molecules and heterogeneity analysis.