

Computational challenges arising from the theory of Orthogonal Polynomials
Diego Dominici, SUNY at New Paltz

While the theory of discrete classical (class 0) orthogonal polynomials is well understood, very little is known about discrete semi-classical (classes 1 and beyond) orthogonal polynomials. In this talk we will present some open problems related to the structure relations and representation of these polynomials, stressing the need for symbolic computation techniques.