

Anderson acceleration for time-dependent problems.

Rob Haelterman, Royal Military Academy (School)

Anderson acceleration is well known within a limited research community. In this talk an illustration is given on how it could be applied to a host of other types of problems and how its performance could be further enhanced when the problem to be solved is time-dependent.