

Computing with relative train tracks

Mark Feighn, Rutgers University

Relative train track maps, introduced by Bestvina-Handel, are convenient representatives of free group outer automorphisms. They serve as analogues of Thurston's normal form for surface mapping classes. I will describe joint work with Michael Handel using relative train tracks to compute invariants of free group automorphisms.