

Experiments on crowd-robot interactions

Nicole Abaid, Virginia Tech

This talk presents an experimental study on human crowd behavior performed in a motion capture studio at Virginia Tech. The crowd moved in an experimental domain that replicated a congested building on campus, and both with and without a custom-designed mobile robot developed by a senior design team. Preliminary analysis show that crowd behavior was impacted by the robot's presence.